Can Catholics Be Registered at Two Parishes?

By Monsignor Charles Pope

Featured in Our Sunday Visitor (osvnews.com)

Question: Is it permissible for a person to be registered at two parishes? We are blessed with lots of options, and one parish seems to meet our formation needs better, while the other connects us with a diverse community that we value. — Donald R. McCrabb, Greenbelt, Maryland

Answer: It is permissible. Your experience is a common one today, and both parishes may wish to have you in their records so as to reach out from time to time.

In terms of Canon Law, no distinctions or requirements should be based on the question of “registration” in a parish. The concept of registration is a very American one — and a concept that helps in many ways, but it is not a strict requirement of Church law. A parish or a pastor who refuses to extend sacraments or other ministrations based on whether a person or family is registered is violating the rights of such Catholics. There may be other canonical grounds wherein a pastor or parish seeks to delay the celebration of sacraments until certain expectations are met, but registration is not one of them.

Simply put, there is no requirement to be “registered” in a parish in order for sacraments to be celebrated, or other requests, such as “letters of good standing,” be issued.

That said, Catholics who do not practice their faith in any meaningful way ought not simply demand that pastors or parishes write letters of good standing or declare that they are faithful Catholics if there is no evidence of this. “Registration” is an American way of seeking to organize a parish and assist in communicating and unifying a parish. Faithful Catholics generally appreciate this and cooperate with parish attempts to unify and reach out in meaningful ways. Hence, many pastors and parish staff are often dubious of the status of those who seek letters of good standing, etc., who are otherwise unknown to the staff and leadership of the parish. Paper has perfect recall, and records of registration and ongoing contributions carry a lot of weight in terms of demonstrating regular attendance and on-going support of the work of the church.

So, where does all this leave us? Pastors and parish staff ought not treat registration as if it were required by law, which it is not. But, neither should Catholics refuse the reasonable request that they be registered where they regularly attend.
